Adventure

"Wonder and delight...as children look, feel, manipulate and listen, they discover that the world of nature is exciting and filled with endless opportunities for exploring and discovering." Ruth Wilson

"What is the most important place on the planet for children? Your back yard. That's right, that small simple place that children visit every day is actually the most important place in the world. It is the place where children use their senses to explore the planet and experience the wonders of nature."
